by Mark Ehlenfeldt, USDA-ARS

Come into modern-day Whitesbog, stand somewhere near the front of the General Store and look west. Now go back about 100 years to the early 1900s. This is your view. It’s a Photoshop composite of two photos, but gives you a good perspective of West Whitesbog Road in about 1910. The three cottages on the right are recognizable. They are still there today, and in truth, not much changed. They’ve been restored! - preserved! At sufficiently high magnification, the edges of the Barrel Factory, and the Barrel Storage Building (the modern-day Cranberry and Blueberry Museum) can be seen beyond the cottages. On the left is the Cranberry Packing and Storage Building; sadly, now long gone. What we currently see at this spot is the Whitesbog parking lot. The structure pictured is the later rendition of the Cranberry Storage Building (that’s how we know it’s about 1915). In the earliest version (about 1896), what is here as the large open bay door on the elevated second level was a porch-like loading area at the end of a free-standing single building. In the subsequent round of major expansion and reconstruction (completed by 1912), the porch was enclosed and two more major co-linear wings of equal size to the original building were added. The wing perpendicular to the road was added during this expansion as well. This wing housed facilities for manual cranberry sorting (which was done before packing and shipping) and had six windows on its western lower level (the opposite side of what’s pictured in the photo) to provide optimum light for sorting. The modern-day Pinelands Antique Engine Assn. Museum building was a Power House that occupied an area behind this wing at approximately the center of the Storage Building.

Currently, some of the remaining ruins of the building’s third segment can still be seen several hundred feet further down the road at what would have been the opposite end of this building (across from the Barrel Factory and the Cranberry and Blueberry Museum). Although the building is gone, enjoy this perspective. It’s a grand view from the heyday of Whitesbog! ■
How Migrants Built Whitesbog ... and America
by Kiyomi Locker

When you hear the question “What are you?”, what is the first answer to pop into your mind? Are you a male or a female? Are you a mother, sister, brother, or grandfather? Or when this question is posed, do you say, “I am Italian”, “I am German”, “I am (insert ethnicity here).”? Unless Indigenous American blood flows through your veins, your ancestors crossed an ocean to get here in the very recent past, journeying to the land of promise and opportunity as the word spread of the landmass to the West. They came in waves from all across Europe; they came enslaved, forced to do the work of others. They came with hopes of providing better lives for their children, or even came as children for the hope of a better life for themselves. However or wherever they came from, they came and never stopped. These migrants became the backbone of the United States workforce, launching the U.S. in the Industrial Revolution to amazing heights.

Whitesbog was not exempt from this boom of European influx, in fact, migrant workers are what powered the farm when it came time to harvest both our cranberries and blueberries. Our archives are full of pictures that reveal a bygone age, an age that I am sure many of our members look back on fondly, or about which they have stories related to that time. (If anyone has any stories about Whitesbog, I would love to hear them and put them in our oral history vault). Whitesbog attracted workers from all corners: African Americans, Portuguese, local children (like my grandfather), and fresh-off-the-boat Italians. The most influential group of workers that Whitesbog attracted were Italian American immigrants; there was no denying why the two auxiliary settlements were named Rome and Florence.

Italian migrant workers proved themselves to be hardworking, reliable, and willing to do what they must to earn their living. They tended to employ their children in the fields, working alongside them, to make the most money possible. Yet, when this became a nationwide issue, the White family sprang to action and built a schoolhouse to educate the younger children. These migrants flooded in from big cities, following their padrones, the labor bosses who would organize the people and get them to the fields. While the padrone system may have not been as beneficial for the workers as it was for the boss, it allowed the opportunity for workers to reach outside the cities to greater prospects.

Immigrants worked in the fields, gathered the crops, packed and sorted, transported, and did all things necessary to ensure the harvest was a fruitful one, just as migrant workers of modern times do. While the demographic has changed, the pursuit of a better life and the willingness to put in hard work is something that all citizens of the United States should understand.

The current rhetoric of our political hierarchy asks us to look down upon those whom they do not view as our equals. But as custodians of Whitesbog, I believe it is our duty to stand for those who simply wish to do the work, and benefit from all the aspects this country has to offer. I ask for all of us to look with compassion in our hearts this New Year, to ensure that the legacy of not only Whitesbog, but also of this country of immigrants, is not forgotten or lost.
A Busy Year for Building Projects in Whitesbog Village

by John Joyce

The past year was certainly a busy one for projects that maintain or enhance the twenty-five buildings that Whitesbog Preservation Trust is responsible for throughout the Whitesbog Village. The Building Repair and Restoration (BR&R) account is the funding mechanism responsible for almost all of the structural repair work done in Whitesbog. It utilizes 75% of the rents collected from village buildings, and is supplemented with various grants that the Trust has been able to secure on a regular basis through the years.

These BR&R funds pay for all of the recurring maintenance activities on the buildings. These include the garbage & recycling dumpsters, and electric bills for the Power House (#6), Museum (#7), Interpretive Cottage (#9), Barrel Factory (#8) and the Machine Shop (#17). The alarm bills for the Museum and Suningive and other routine tasks such as pest control services, storm window/screen change outs, yearly gutter clean-outs, and yearly furnace maintenance are also paid with BR&R funds.

Of all the projects completed in 2019, the biggest visual impact was provided by two trim painting contracts which resulted in full trim paint jobs on 14 buildings, and full exterior paint jobs on the Boarding House (#24) and the Cranberry Substation (#37). The trim paint project was helped when the Trust secured a $15,000 matching grant from the 1772 Foundation administered through the New Jersey Historic Trust.

The Blueberry-Cranberry Museum (#7) underwent a complete rescaling and repainting of the metal roof. The foundation was also repaired and repainted, and some interior floor replacement was done at the east end of the building. The exterior paint job for the entire building will be a priority in 2020.

Significant improvements to the Barrel Factory (where many of the Trust’s lectures and gatherings are held) (#8) included full trim paint, four rebuilt windowsills, and the installation of four new 60-inch ceiling fans and a couple of window-unit air conditioners. This should help make the building far more comfortable for hot weather events throughout the summer.

Two Interpretive Cottages (#9 and #10) had floorboards replaced, and repairs were done to the ADA ramp outside #9 in addition to full trim paint on the building. Building #11 which the Trust is using as an art gallery also had some concrete leveling done on the porch although we are still awaiting the replacement of the three porch concrete slabs that required replacement due to excessive cracking. The fourth cottage is the Welcome Center/Office for the Trust, and it too benefited from a full trim paint job.

Many of the residential buildings in the village underwent extensive upgrades. Furnaces were replaced in the Boarding House (#24A) and the Schoolhouse (#29). Full trim paint jobs were done on all six rental units: Boarding House (#24A and 24B), Superintendent’s House (#26), Darlington House (#27), Schoolhouse (#29), Old General Store (#35A) and the Two-story Cottage (#36). Unit 35A had new locks installed, floors painted, and walls touched up. Interior stair repairs were done in the Two-Story Cottage (#36) and the Boarding House (#24A).

Much work was also done to Suningive (#34). Miss White’s former home received a full trim paint job and all of the windows were cleaned inside and out. An access panel in the kitchen was replaced and the Archives room got a new AC/dehumidifier window unit so the Trust could stabilize the climate in this one very important room. The steady climate control will allow us to better preserve the many valuable documents that are kept in this room.

By far the largest monetary investment put into any building was the extensive effort to upgrade the Darlington House (#27). In early 2019, the house became vacant for the first time in over 20 years, but it needed much more work than the Trust had anticipated. In addition to the full house trim paint job, the entire house was rewired. All of the damaged plaster throughout the house was repaired and then the entire interior repainted. The sunporch interior trim was scraped and repainted, and over a dozen cracked windows were replaced with new glass. The oil tank was pumped out and the intake line was repaired. The final major renovation has been replacing the upstairs bathroom fixtures and restoring the tub/shower. The original claw-foot tub has already been reglazed as part of this renovation.

All of this progress was made possible using BR&R funds and the matching grant from the 1772 Foundation. All told, the Trust spent just over $100,000 on building projects during 2019, and the collected-rents returned $21,430 to the General Operating Account for the Trust through a 25% administrative transfer. We are anxiously looking forward to another productive year in 2020 as we move forward in our efforts to preserve Whitesbog Village as one of New Jersey’s true historic treasures.
End of the Year Archives Report
by Kiyomi Locker

As our first full year with a dedicated Archivist came to a close, the Whitesbog Preservation Trust Archives Department can be proud to have accomplished a significant number of goals and milestones. To put into perspective the time and dedication Sarah Augustine, our intern, and I gave this year, working towards the future of Whitesbog; I logged over 1,255 hours at Whitesbog, with Sarah cataloging her internship hours at over 327 hours.

We completed our project grant, generously given to us by the New Jersey Historical Commission, to conserve, preserve, and publicize the glass negatives taken by Elizabeth C. White. This grant was multifaceted and allowed us the opportunity to purchase items that will let us to continue with preservation efforts on our own. Included in this grant plan was the purchase of:

- 18 archival binders from Archival Methods, a New York State company, to replace our derelict and rotting binders
- an Epson Perfection V850 Pro Scanner which allows our own staff and volunteers to digitize our collection
- a Canon EOS Rebel SL2 Camera and accessories to capture objects to create profiles in our cataloging system

All of these electronics and materials allow the Whitesbog Preservation Trust Archives Department to continue our mission of preserving Whitesbog and Pine Barrens culture/history.

In addition to our project grant, archives staff took on many events to help increase archives revenue. We held 5 regular monthly house tours and 4 special house tour events, ‘Traveling with Miss Lizzie’ in August 2019, Haunted House Tours in October, Lantern Tours of Suningive and the Village in November, and then finished up in December with Holly Holiday Tours. Most of these events were new and implemented to continue to grow our revenue stream. We also hosted two Living History events in July and October. Our ‘Cranberry Living History’ event saw the largest number of visitors that our Living History events have ever seen, over 70 people. Many of those visitors were people who had never visited our site before.

We are looking forward to an even more prosperous and event-filled 2020! We hope to bring in more visitors and help others to fall in love with this little Pine Barrens hideaway, just as we have. Whitesbog is truly a gem and we should all work to continue the goals of Whitesbog Preservation Trust in any way we can.

New Year, More Stories!
by Sarah Augustine

The year 2020 is shaping up to be a wonderfully productive for Whitesbog’s oral history program, ‘Harvesting Stories’. ‘Harvesting Stories’ was started in 2017 thanks to a grant from the New Jersey Council for the Humanities. It is an ongoing project that involves making video recordings of people connected to Whitesbog and the surrounding area as they tell their stories. Already, there are nine interviews in our collection. This year we will be expanding our oral history collection at Whitesbog Historic Village. We are actively working to get in touch with new people to interview, and plan to start the recording process in the coming months.

Further, we are taking time to educate ourselves on new methods of oral history collection. On January 6-9, archivist Kiyomi Locker and I attended the Oral History Training Institute at the Science History Institute (formerly the Chemical Heritage Foundation) in Philadelphia. Kiyomi and I had the chance to work with a group of individuals from varied backgrounds to learn and discuss practices for collecting oral histories. During the four-day workshop, we worked through recordings and transcripts from the Science History Institute’s expansive collection, as well as various articles written by top individuals in the field. There was also an opportunity for us to apply the information presented in the workshop, in an exercise in which we interviewed one another. It was such an inspiring experience! Coming away from this workshop, I am especially excited to continue ‘Harvesting Stories’.

I encourage anyone who would like to participate or recommend an interviewee to contact me at sarahaeugustine@gmail.com. Together, we can preserve the story of Whitesbog for generations to come!
The Pinelands Institute at Whitesbog: 2019 Overview
by Jessica Grill

PINES had a very active year in 2019! We officially became a program of the WPT in July, finalizing the transfer process that began in February. Jessica Grill was hired as the 2nd part-time staff member of the WPT, and 4 per diem instructors were secured. These new instructors instruct during field trips and weekend programs on an as-needed basis. This year, we had more than 4000 participants in our programs!

During 2019 we attended two major outreach events – ‘Lines on the Pines’ in March where we begin advertising the merger of PINES and WPT, and then in November we received a free booth for the 2019 New Jersey Education Association (NJEA) Conference. At the NJEA Convention we had the opportunity to reach a few thousand teachers from across the state. While many teachers were out of our intended-audience radius, we handed out many pamphlets to local teachers. After the convention, we scheduled 5 field trips directly as a result of the outreach opportunity. Additionally, Lise Mainor (former WPT Board President) reached out to the Pemberton-Browns Mills School Board and was able to arrange a meeting of PINES with the superintendents and principals of the township schools. From this meeting, we have been able to schedule 5 field trips from the district elementary schools, each trip for an entire grade of between 80-100 students. Additionally, we continue our partnership with the 21st Century Program providing 3 after-school programs throughout the year at 3 Pemberton-Browns Mills township elementary schools (Denbo, Stackhouse, Busansky), and one summer camp field trip program.

In the fall, we started expanding our family program offerings. A twice-monthly story time program had a good pilot run, with the Pinelands Family Success Center sponsoring local families to come to the story time. Based on the feedback received, we will continue to offer the story time program, restarting in the spring. However, due to attendance issues, we will require a certain number of paid RSVP’s in the future to ensure the program is profitable.

Membership End-of-Year Report 2019

Trust membership today is at an all-time high of 533, and 40 of these are new members, an ~8% increase! Hooray! THANK YOU. Your membership makes a difference. It helps preserve Whitesbog Historic Village as well as share its history and significance. Your ongoing commitment helps us with the preservation of the archives, The Cranberry & Blueberry Farm Museum, upkeep of Elizabeth White’s Gardens and her home, Suningive. Membership funds help continue educational outreach and field trips of the Pinelands Institute (PINES). It helps with projects such as the Stage, restoration of the cottages, the Whitesbog Art Gallery, upgrades to the General Store, new signs, trails, and information centers around the village. Remember YOUR Membership goes a long way. We sincerely want to thank YOU!
